Nylon As White As New

If you have trouble with white nylon becoming grayed or yellow with use, and regular washing methods don't restore its whiteness, you'll be interested in the following information.

Nylon is a sturdy fiber and vigorous methods of washing can be used if the weave and construction permit. Wash garments thoroughly with soap or synthetic detergent, by hand or washing machine, depending on the construction of the garments. Fine lace and material with seams which may fray should be put in a pillow slip or a special mesh laundry bag when a machine is used.

Use an enamel container. To one gallon of hot water (160 degrees or simmer—don't boil), add one package of color remover and add wet garments immediately. Stir gently, keeping the temperature at 160 degrees. Temperatures above that may set wrinkles that are hard to remove by ironing. If after 30 minutes whiteness is restored evenly remove the garments and rinse thoroughly in hot water. If whiteness is not evenly restored leave in the remover 30 minutes more.

If the garments still are not as white as you would like, add two tablespoons of clorox and two tablespoons of a synthetic detergent to about one gallon of warm water. Immerse garments, and with occasional stirring let soak 30 minutes. Rinse thoroughly in warm water.

For final rinse, immerse garments into about one gallon of warm water containing a tablespoon of an optical whitener such as Nylon Brite, Nylon Nu, etc. Drip dry and iron with a steam iron or a dry iron at rayon setting. Iron on the wrong side, or over a cloth on the right side.

Remember, you may not need to take all of the steps to get good results, but you do need to take steps in the order given.

To keep nylons white wash white garments separately. Even colors can cause grayness. Wash nylons thoroughly and rinse carefully, using plenty of water. If hard water is used, use a synthetic detergent or a water softener, and also use a little detergent in the rinse water. Regular soap combines with hard water and leaves a gray deposit. Do not apply extreme heat. It will cause nyolns to turn yellow. In using automatic dryers, do not set temperatures above 200 degrees. Keep your iron set on lowest temperature.

Follow directions on label, and note particularly any "cautions" given.

FARM NEWS

By J. A. Smith, County Agent

Management Will Improve Pasture Yields

Proper grazing practices wil increase the yield, vigor and length of life of ladino clover-orchard grass or ladino clover-fescue pastures.

Rotational grazing is the recommended method for grazing ladino-tall grass pastures. Remove animals when the pasture is grazed down to a height of two inches.

Closer grazing will weaken the stand and result in slow recovery. Let the pasture reach an average height of from 6 to 12 inches before grazing again. Repeat this process throughout the pasture season. A minimum of three fields should be used in a rotational grazing system, and four fields are preferable.

Many excellent stands of ladino clover-orchard grass in particular have been lost because of over-grazing and grazing too continuously. Proper grazing management is just as important as good fertilization and liming in maintaining a satisfactory stand, but is often overlooked.

Clip Pastures Before They Seed

Clipping pastures before they go to seed will keep them more productive and will get rid of the stemmy growth. Preventing the pastures from producing seed also tends to encourage leaf growth.

Excess pasture makes excellent silage and hay if taken before the forage becomes woody. If the forage is not harvested, the pasture can be clipped high so the leafy portions of the pasture plants will not be removed.

Virus-Free Strawberry Plants Available

Appomattox gardeners have 35 varieties of improved strawberry stock from which to choose for planting this year.

The choices include 11 more than were available last year, which are Earlidawn, Eden, Empire, Florida Ninety, Gen, Knowoy, Marion Bell, Redglow, Redstar, Sioux and Surecrop.

Two of these improved stocks, Redglow and Surecrop, also are resistant to red stele disease, a root rot especially troublesome in some gardens in Appomattox County.

Spray Now to Control Certain Insects

The evergreen bagworm is beginning to hatch from the overwintering egg stage, and home owners who had bagworm trouble last year should guard against it this year with a spray of arsenate of lead, DDT, or malathion. Apply within the next two or three weeks according to the directions on the label of the package.

Another insect that is beginning to cause trouble is cysterbell scale, a pest of lilac, poplar, ash, elm, and other trees. Spray with malathion at the rate of 2 teaspoonsful per gallon of water to kill the crawler scales before they are covered with a hard protective cover. Make the first application during the last few days of May or the first few days of June, and repeat in 10 days. A third application may be necessary about the last of June to get complete control.

Play safe — drive carefully.
